Success is in the details

Welcome to the Muraba Residences, an architectural gem set on the Eastern Crescent of the Palm Jumeirah. It is a collection of just 46 apartments and 4 penthouses, every one of which is oriented to make the most of the uninterrupted views across the water, right along the skyline of the whole of Dubai.

With such clean lines, flawless finishes and light open spaces, attention to detail is paramount. All the fittings, fixtures and appliances within each apartment have been hand-picked to complement perfectly the overall concept.

Vision is one thing, execution is quite another matter, but it is this attention to detail that sets the Muraba Residences apart, and will continue to do so for many years to come.

Ibrahim Al Ghurair

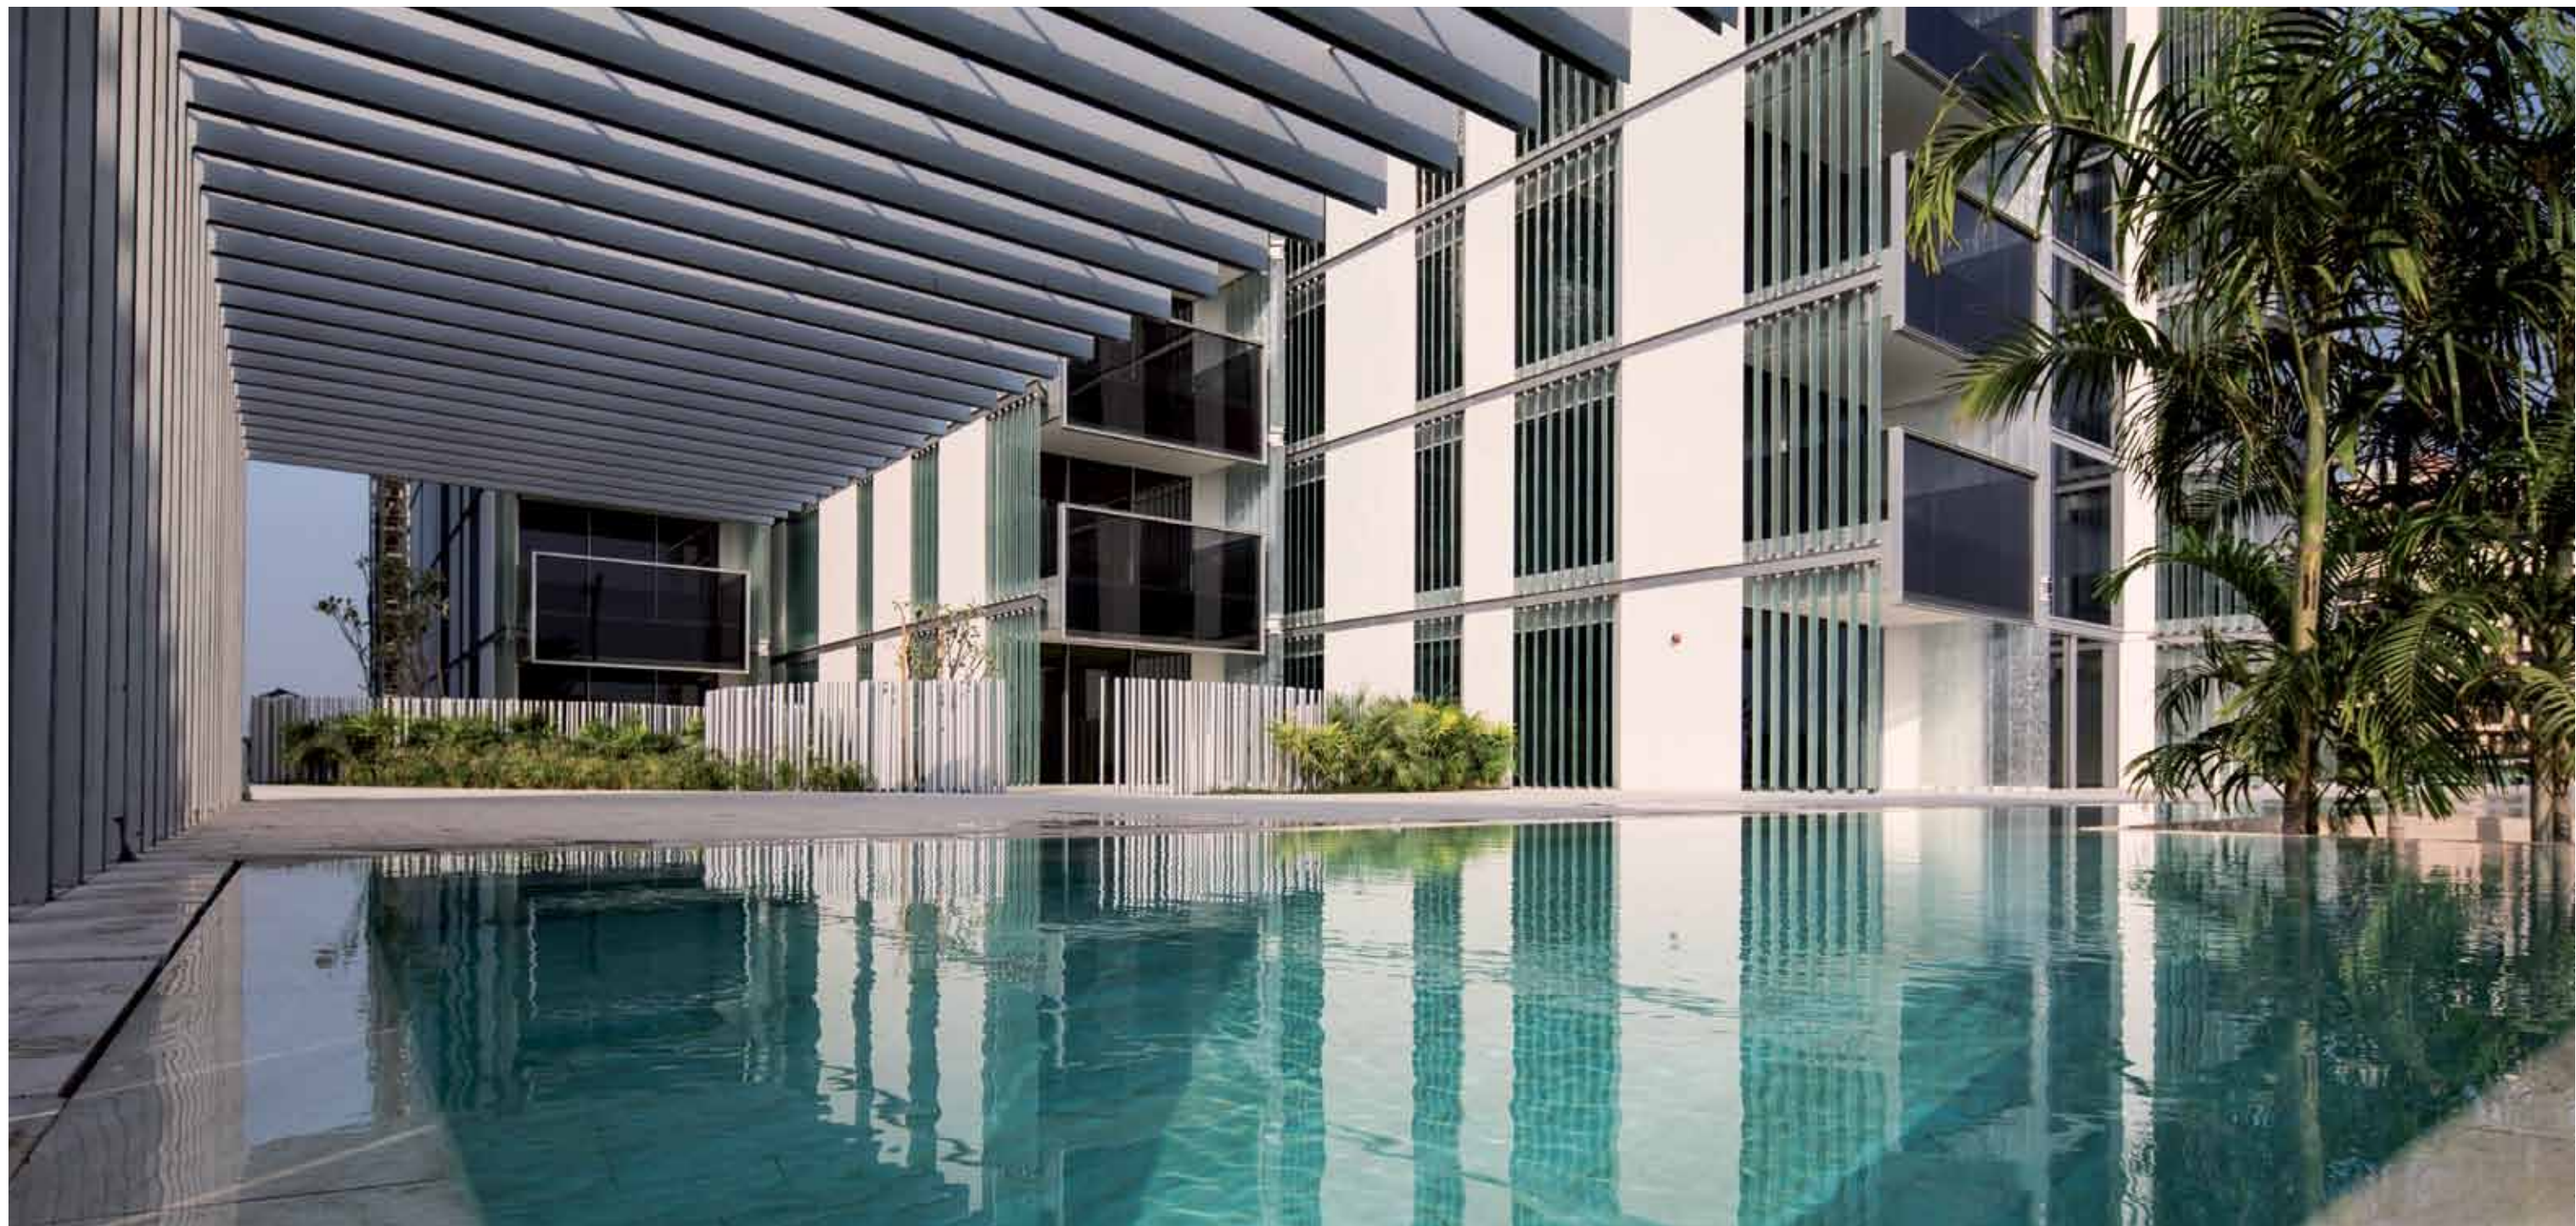

The architect's perspective

"Innovation does not occur in isolation, but as a result of the joining together of different disciplines which can unite and give the best of themselves only after extensive examination. In architecture, innovation is often portrayed as something superfluous, perhaps merely something linked to design. But we shall only have real innovation if it is also at the origin of the concept, in the programme itself and in the material and the construction techniques; we shall only have it if it is present from the first moment, when the need becomes a question to answer, and if that question is considered by all the participants in the answer. Only something which improves a person's experience qualitatively can be really innovating."

An important element for the sustainability of an object is its durability. The more durable an object is, the more sustainable it can be considered to be. Handicraft work is functional to aesthetic durability because customisation and manual work create a bond towards the object that make its beauty appreciated for longer.
